

CALLING ALL MILITARY AIRCRAFT MECHANICS

Thank you for your service! Trans States Airlines values your skills and training. Convert your military experience into a civilian career as an aircraft mechanic and enjoy quick advancement and top-tier pay.

Mechanics with more than 30 months of military aviation experience can get a sign-off from the FAA to take the Airframe and/or Powerplant (A & P) exam.

HERE'S HOW IT WORKS:

1. Apply for an Aircraft Maintenance Technician position with Trans States and receive a conditional job offer upon successful completion of the interview process.

2. Request your training records prior to your separation date. A DD-214 form is required, though training records are preferred.

- Trans States will facilitate a meeting with the FAA to have your military experience reviewed. If your experience qualifies, the FAA will issue a certificate of eligibility that allows you to take the Airframe and/or Powerplant (A & P) exam.

3. Prepare for the exam by using your VA benefits to take a refresher course (optional).

4. Upon passing the exam, start your new career as a Trans States mechanic at one of our locations around the country.
